DataArt, the global technology consulting firm that creates end-to-end solutions, has appointed Toby Bryans to its finance practice. Bryans steps into a senior role as Principal Consultant, Finance Practice DataArt. He leaves the position of Director, Onboarding NASDAQ NLX.

Bryans brings to DataArt strategic cross-discipline expertise in financial technology and the wider financial services sector. Bryans was at NASDAQ NLX for three years, where he reported to the President, ensuring smooth onboarding, working across sales, technology, compliance, project management and senior management teams. Recently he was responsible for the successful onboarding of market participants including JP Morgan and ED&F Man. Prior to NASDAQ NLX Bryans spent eight years at Schneider Trading Associates Ltd, rising to Head Strategic Technologist. Having held positions previously at Voltrex Options and EccoWare.

DataArt Managing Director UK, Dmitry Bagrov said:

“We are delighted that Toby Bryans is joining DataArt’s fast-growing financial practice. His experience working on complex technology projects involving proprietary trading firms, high-frequency trading houses, global capital markets and tier one banks will be invaluable to DataArt’s growing finance practice.”

DataArt Global Head of Finance Practice, Cliff Moyce said:

“In the past year, DataArt’s finance practice has gone from strength to strength, both in the UK and USA. With the addition of Toby our ability to deliver on complex technological projects will only increase.”

Toby Bryans said:

“DataArt’s core values of commitment to client service, innovation and delivery of high quality solutions to large-scale technology projects sets the firm apart from others in the industry. I am proud to be joining such an effective team, who have delivered on some of the most difficult projects in financial services and worked for clients as diverse as McGraw-Hill Financial, Coller Capital and BankingUp.”

Bryans is a member of the British Computer Society, the London Capital Group and has advised the Parliamentary IT Committee. Outside work Bryans provides technical assistance to charities and is a keen photographer. He holds a BSc in Computer Science from Southampton University and speaks conversational French and Spanish.
