

New travel tech partnership

24 April 2019

Global technology consultancy DataArt, which designs, develops and supports software solutions, has announced that it is partnering with global booking service GroundScope to deliver a new iOS version of a car booking app that enables travelling employees to manage their journey.

“DataArt proved to be a trusted technology partner who helped us to launch the new version of our car booking application available for iOS users,” said Emma Hamlin, COO/CTO of GroundScope. “The project management and teamwork were second-to-none in delivering the app on time and within budget. It is a pleasure to work with a knowledgeable, efficient, like-minded partner that set innovation and high-quality customer service as a priority. The next project already underway is to upgrade our Android app.”

Anton Krasikov, Account Manager at DataArt, said: “The challenge for DataArt was to create GroundScope iOS application and integrate it smoothly with the existing booking platform. The resulting solution offers users a modern look and feel combined with a high-quality service in line with leading-edge technology.”

Original publication:

<https://www.dataart.com/pressroom/media-about-dataart/new-travel-tech-partnership>